Are students of poverty really different? The research says, "Yes!" But HOW are they different and what can you do about it? This powerful workshop explores both the science and the specific classroom strategies to reach students from poverty. You can succeed with them, and you'll learn exactly how to do it in this session. This amazing event gives you the insider background knowledge, key skills and a practical roadmap for academic success with kids from poverty. You'll understand poverty in a revolutionary new way. Get secrets to intervene in positive changes that can skyrocket achievement scores.

Eric Jensen is a dynamic author and researcher who co-founded the first international brain-based learning program and has authored 24 books on the brain and learning including: Teaching with Poverty in Mind, Teaching with the Brain in Mind, Teaching with the Arts in Mind, Enriching the Brain and Deeper Learning.

For more information about Eric Jensen, go to his website at www.jensenlearning.com.

Intended Audience: This course is for any educator, from pre-K through adult who works with students of poverty. Is your school ranked low in student achievement? Understanding why and how your students' brains work (or fail to work) can give you the tools you need to trigger a positive learning revolution! Join us for an engaging, fast-moving, results-oriented program where you can learn to differentiate your teaching and school environment in ways that successfully reach students of poverty. (Both Title I and Title II funds are a perfect use for this professional development!)
